The unbearable weight of opinions

Why are we often obsessed with what others are going to think???

Everybody has an opinion that is a thought or belief about something or someone.

We always think about what others are going to think. But that's just how the world is.

Of course, we think about what others will think or say, but if we cannot draw a line, at some point, our entire life will become nothing but a series of reactions- of what we think we ought to do, according to the world around us, rather than what we should do according to ourselves.

Do we think who go around giving their opinions freely ever think about the consequences... Do we ever think they worry if their opinions are right or wrong? No.

Most people think opinions are butterflies, floating one place to another before quietly dying and disappearing without a trace. But opinions are like bees that carry the burden of expectation from one person to another, changing their actions and reactions. And sometimes they sting, they sting very badly.

The truth is, we are trapped and suffocating under and the weight of the opinions of everyone around us and maybe the only way out is to stop listening once in a while and instead, speak.
